Specifically, the Office Action had rejected the currently pending claims as there was a lack of disclosure with regard to the ability of the claimed polypeptides to control microbial infection. It was brought to the Examiner's attention that neither of the claimed uses for the invention, that being psoriasis and contact dermatitis, involved an etiology of infection or microbes. The Examiner agreed with the above and withdrew the rejections pending a copy of this Interview Summary and a copy of a formal reply to the Office Action.
